discovery of the book was made.

Abraham Lincoln was for a time partly submerged by the wave of French infidelity which swept over America soon after the American revolution. It affected all classes and conditions of men. There were very few Christians in our colleges. In 1795 Timothy Dwight, the noted scholar and author, became president of Yale College. There were scarcely more than half a dozen professed Christians then in Yale. Princeton College was founded in 1746, the number of men openly Christian there soon after the revolution was pain fully small. Harvard is the oldest of our America colleges, having been founded in 1638, for the training of young men for the Christian ministry; but at the close of the period named the number of its Christian stadents was small indeed.

the number of its Christian students he considered its arguments simply unanswerable. It is surely not a hit the remarkable that all knowledge of this book perished from the people of the and atheistic influences of his of Springfield. But at the time of the construction of the constru early life. His father was a Eaptist, the observance of the Lincoln center so were his mother and his stepmother. The place and date of his father's roafession of faith and baptism are well known. Our greatest American was the product of a Baptist home. But his social environment was prime of Mr. Lincoln's reading of the book itive in the extreme. In his early boy. was his return to the sample faith in hood he read books of a high order.
